2US Tackling
financial

Edinburgh Trust Caseworker

Welcome

Thank you for your interest in this critical role for Turn2us. We are looking forward to hearing from people who share our deep commitment to supporting those who are facing financial shock in the UK. Your contribution will make a direct and tangible difference to people's lives, every day.

Since I started at Turn2us in March 2019, it has been a privilege to see the incredible work that Turn2us does. We support millions to change their lives for the better, every year. The level of organisational knowledge about our core business is extensive – we really know our stuff. And there is a very short distance between impulse and impact: the freedom to act in simple, pragmatic ways that are immediately helpful is a significant aspect of the rewards of working here.

Our overall ratio of investment to out turn is well above average. One good example is our Benefits Calculator, which costs around £350k per year to run. Used nearly 2.8m times in 2019/20, we believe that 232,000 claimants will have successfully secured an average income uplift of £5,320 if they continue to claim for a full year. That is a staggering £1.2 billion of previously unclaimed benefits going to where they were intended.

Of course, many of our activities are by their nature about people helping people, one individual or one family at a time – and we know that this work is amplified incredibly effectively by our strong partnerships with other charities and organisations working in local communities. A key priority for the future is to enable the organisation to understand how to do so and devise a plan to maximise our impact with and for people and to tackle the system that fails so many of us.

Our culture is a very significant pull factor for people joining this organisation – how we are being, just as much as what we are doing. Our approach is infused with a sense of highly competent humility, facilitating and enabling colleagues, partners and crucially those for whom we exist to co-create solutions that work.

In the context of some important conversations taking place in our sector, I am unequivocal about our organisational commitment to Equity, Diversity & Inclusion, embedded in values and behaviours that enhance our working culture. An uncompromising personal commitment to working towards a fully diverse and inclusive working environment is essential for these roles, and comes ahead of other requirements.

The last year has been extremely challenging for people across the UK. The number of people in unpredictable employment, holding down several jobs to make ends meet, and the impact of Covid's lockdown has led to structural instability in many communities. The rapid rise in foodbank usage is a canary in the mine for fundamental problems ahead. So, working with partners, we have to grow our impact, and this recruitment is a major investment in the strength and capacity of our staff as we build a model that will take us confidently into the future.

Thomas Lawson,
Chief Executive Officer

From your hiring manager

Do you believe everyone has the right to enough to live on? Are you excited by the ambition in Edinburgh to eradicate poverty by 2030? Are you committed to working in a way that ensures dignity and equity to those of us in financial need?

Turn2us is a UK charity tackling poverty. We make grants to people living in financial insecurity and provide information to support people to understand their rights to social security and other available grants they may be able to access. We are working to break down the barriers that cause financial hardship including racism, gender inequality, classism, ableism and homophobia.

The Edinburgh caseworker works in the Edinburgh Trust team, part of the Programmes and Partnerships directorate. Across the different teams within the directorate, we work together and in partnership with other organisations to provide safe and practical support in response to people's needs. We believe in equity, diversity, inclusion and belonging, and approach our work through this lens, whilst striving to shift power away from ourselves and into the communities for whom we exist.

In Edinburgh specifically we provide a grants programme, delivered through a network of referral partners, in order to reach individuals and families who are excluded from financial security due to the barriers they face. The caseworker role is at the heart of delivering this support.

You will join us at a truly exciting time – as we continue to evolve our grant making and take our next steps into growing our programme, in order that we make meaningful and lasting contributions, in collaboration with others, to the mission of eradicating poverty in Edinburgh.

This pack provides information about our work here at Turn2us. You will also find information about the skills we need for this role and how to apply.

I look forward to reading your application.

Hannah Lawson

- Follow GDPR good practice and organisational policy.
- Participate in organisation-wide working groups on areas of interest with an approach of continuous learning to improve impact and ways of working.
- Work with colleagues on new ways of working and development opportunities, ensuring that co production is at the heart of new developments.
- Bring a strong equity, diversity and inclusion lens to grant making and continuously identify ways to improve practice.

- Provide clear and accessible information to referral partners as required, communicating application queries or outcomes in a timely manner, responding to queries from partners, and sharing feedback with the Senior Partnership Development Officer and Edinburgh Trust Manager.

- Contribute to the monitoring and management of a number of referral partner relationships.

The post holder will take responsibility to integrate safeguarding into all aspects of their work, complying with organisational policies and frameworks.

The post holder will take responsibility for maintaining the vision and principles of the Edinburgh Trust in the course of their work:

Edinburgh Trust Vision:

To be a collaborative partner in the mission to eradicate poverty in Edinburgh. It is the ambition of the Edinburgh Trust to deliver programmes of support across the city that uplift and improve the lives of Edinburgh's citizens who are experiencing, or are at risk of, poverty.

- Co-production sits at the heart of our development and helps drive our work; we listen to, learn from and include those who are experts by experience.
- We embrace listening and reflective practice and evaluation as a means to continually evolve and improve our impact.
- We commit to always taking a long term view focusing on the sustainability of our impact, even when our interventions are short-term.
- We acknowledge that structural and systemic changes must be made in order to end poverty.
- We will be accountable to the citizens of Edinburgh, for whom we exist, and to our partners.

About Turn2us

Our purpose:

So everyone has the opportunity to build financial sustainability and thrive, support people need in the face of life changing events, and collaborates to tackle the causes and symptoms of poverty.

We've had a long and varied history over the years, but our mission has always been the same – to fight poverty in the UK and help people through tough times.

The charity began in May 1897, when our founder, Elizabeth Finn, set out to right wrongs of social injustices. Armed with nothing more than a desire to help and a handful of supportive friends, Elizabeth set out to make a difference to people who were struggling to heat their homes, or provide for their children. Today, her legacy lives on, with an even greater need for our services than ever before. Especially in the light of the coronavirus pandemic, which is predicted will have the biggest impact on economic well-being in the UK since the end of World War Two.

Our three year strategy puts us in a strong position to be able to offer people the support they need to keep themselves afloat while the forces around them are pushing them deeper into financial hardship. It is underpinned by the need to tackle the negative discourse and internalised shame around poverty; to campaign for a social security system that is redesigned to meet all of our needs.

Ali, Turn2us service user.

Our strategic aims

Deliver high-quality, practical programmes that include information and financial support so that people can build their own financial sustainability and thrive.

Deliver even better impact for people facing financial hardship through the co-production of our work with experts who have lived experience, in collaboration with other organisations and through a dedication to insight, evaluation, learning and improvement.

Build the profile of Turn2us and its work to reach people facing life-changing events and experiencing poverty, and secure support for the work.

Develop our influence on policy, practice and public opinion, tackling the prejudice towards people experiencing poverty and insisting on their fundamental rights to access social security.

Invest in our culture, systems, knowledge and skills.

Maximise our assets and secure income ethically to achieve impact.

How we work

We help people in three principal ways. The largest of these by expenditure is giving direct financial help through our own charitable grants. In 2019/20, we disbursed over £3.6m to 2,992 people.

The impact of a timely small grant can be extraordinary: for example, someone without a washing machine is likely to spend over £1,100 annually at the laundrette. With a washing machine, they will spend around £64 in the same period on electricity. Recent evaluation showed that the emotional benefit of receiving support was just as vital as the grant itself.

Our other activities focus more on chronic than acute poverty. Here, we support people to increase their income through welfare benefits, charitable grants and other support; and we help by highlighting ways to reduce essential costs. Our advice and signposting are available online, by phone and in person and by working in partnership with frontline organisations and community groups we can direct help where and when it is needed most. And the numbers from our last financial year are impressive.

We also work in close partnership with other leading sector organisations to lead and drive campaigns, undertake research and influence government and policymakers to drive lasting change in UK poverty. Examples of recent campaigns and reports can be seen on our website.

Poverty in the UK

There were already one in five people below the poverty line in the UK before the coronavirus pandemic hit. However, in light of the coronavirus, the number of people struggling to get by is likely to increase as unemployment continues to increase and the economic future of our country remains uncertain. We know that it is the most vulnerable among us who will be impacted the most, with women, single parents, people with disabilities, and Black, Asian and other minority communities most disproportionately affected.

In the first 100 days following the March lockdown in 2020, we saw a huge surge in a demand for our services – an over 500% increase in some cases. One of the reoccurring issues people told us about was that they were struggling to cover the basics, such as putting food on the table, or paying their rent and bills. In a country that believes in fairness and justice, we believe that it isn't right that people are left struggling to keep their heads above water.

Around 14.4 million people live in poverty in the UK: 8.5 million adults, 4.5 million children and 1.3 million pensioners (Social Metrics Commission – SMC).

People with disabilities are much more likely to be living in poverty: half (50%) of households facing poverty consist of families containing one or more people with a disability (SMC).

Every year, the Joseph Rowntree Foundation (JRF) works out how much money you need to manage day-to-day in the UK. The latest figures show that single person needs £19,200 a year before tax and benefits; a single parent with one child needs £28,450, and a family of two parents and two children need £37,400.

In the financial year ending 2019, median household disposable income in the UK was £29,400.

Contrary to assumptions, unemployment is not necessarily a driver of poverty. Increasingly, it's people in work who face poverty.

Recent JRF research shows that 60% of people in poverty in Britain live in a household where someone is in work. However, renters are disproportionately affected by poverty: over 85% of people in poverty live in rented accommodation.

Around £20bn of benefits went unclaimed last year, reflecting the complexity of the system and barriers to claiming.

Each person not claiming just one benefit entitlement could be missing out on over £2,000. In 2017/18 Trussell Trust gave over one million emergency food packages, of which over 40% were given due to 'benefit delays' or 'benefit changes'.

At Turn2us, we are committed to working with others to change the poverty landscape in the UK. To do this, we co-produce our programme design, delivery and evaluation with people who have lived expertise of financial hardship. That, combined with our evaluation of our programmes and data insight will make the development of all of our work – from policy influencing, fundraising, communications and programming – fit for this purpose.

Turn2us and COVID-19

Syeda, Turn2us service user.

“I’m living month to month already. Now with no income, I don’t know what I’ll do”

Syeda,
Turn2us service user

A virus we first heard of just a year ago has claimed over a million lives globally, brought cities to a standstill, and worsened our healthcare and economic divides. Lower wage earners suffered the most job losses while the stock market soared. In the UK some of us made £100bn of savings, whilst from Turn2us’s own research, we found that one in three of us now have to get into debt just to get by each month.

Working together we need to rebuild a more inclusive economy, distributing vaccines and ending the pandemic. Perhaps such progress also can help us address deep-rooted racism and inequality.

In the face of the huge increases of job and income losses and despite the swiftly created and largely successful Job Protection Scheme, furloughing and Self-Employment Income Support Scheme, it was inevitable that many would fall through the net.

Grant making has become critical to stop people being swept in to the trap of poverty, when everything costs more.. Incredibly, Turn2us awarded £4 million in cash grants in response to the sudden increase in income loss, including more than £1.3 million through our Coronavirus grant fund in just eight weeks, as well as our focussed grant-making in Edinburgh. We have supported a record breaking 5,000 families and individuals since April through cash grants alone.

During the summer we saw retailer after retailer hit the wall with household names like Debenhams, the Arcadia Group (Top Shop) and Bon Marche making tens of 1,000s of people redundant; while self-employed people and sole traders saw their order books empty.

At Turn2us in March and April, we saw the daily use of our Benefits Calculator rise from 5,000 to 50,000. Since then people have used it over 2.8 times in order to find benefits for which they were eligible. We have helped more than 1.2 million people complete grant searches so they can find other charities who can support them.

The digital divide has grown with increasing numbers of us struggling to pay for utility bills – including connection to the internet. That’s why our information and support to over 51,000 people through our helpline was so critical.

This year we pushed hard to change the way we designed, delivered, evaluated and developed our programmes – by integrating in a much more consistent and fulsome way the insights of the people for whom the programmes are designed. We now have a team of freelancers who have lived experience of financial hardship improving the impact of our work.

Our national research and insights from our own data show us we need to do a much better job of reaching those who experience financial hardship more severely and frequently. Black and Asian people, those who identify as disabled, women – particularly single parents, young people, and the self-employed have all experienced more significant drops in income, greater use of debt and all of the stress that comes with not having enough money to live on.

People have been extraordinarily generous. Daily Telegraph readers gave over £1.3m so that we could increase our grant making. We have built a our first long term corporate partnership – with Royal London We have been supported by Direct Line, Inflexion, Oakley Advisory and lots of individuals who made significant gifts for all of the work above. We smashed our voluntary income target to reach over £5m.

Ryan's story

“I found myself in an impossible situation, unable to afford the basics. Turn2us gave me a lifeline with their Coronavirus grant – helping me to get by in this crisis”

Ryan,
Turn2us service user

Paul, Turn2us service user.

Just before Christmas 2019, Ryan started a contract consultative chef role for a restaurant in his area. He predominantly works contract roles like this to help open and improve restaurants through his considerable experience as a chef.

Due to the pandemic, even weeks before the lockdown was announced his hours were decreased at the restaurant due to lack of business. Eventually he had to stop working altogether when the lockdown came into effect.

He was immediately left without income and unsure how he would get by, support his nine year-old daughter or keep up payments to his ex-partner with whom his child lives with. As he has been self-employed for a short period of time, he wasn't eligible for the Government's self-employment grant scheme.

Ryan has had to apply for Universal Credit instead – which won't completely cover his outgoings. Whilst he was still waiting for his first payment he saw a news broadcast which mentioned the Turn2us Coronavirus Grant, and decided to apply.

He was awarded a £500 Coronavirus Grant, which allowed him to manage for several more weeks. He's feeling much more positive about his short-term prospects but remains concerned about his job in the long term.
